So it's been brought to my attention that there's a few times a month when a php form submission to a public facing site 500's. It's an old site and a new code owner found that changing the connection variable back to normal made it work. Would you consider someone guilty of negligence if they just leave it as is? A: Yes, leaving a public facing site in that state is negligent, but it could be anything. Most often it's either a user error or the change you put in didn't work. Q: First occurrence of a number in a list of numbers I want to know the first occurrence of a number in a list of numbers. e.g. 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28 it should return 22. but the result is 24. how can i do this, edit: e.g. numbers is a set. 20,21,22,23,24,25,26,27,28,29,30,31 A: You need to increase the first occurrence of 22 by one. Since each number is represented as a list of digits, you can increase the first occurrence of 22 by iterating over the list and performing arithmetic on the digits (assuming that the digits represent numbers in base 10). The objective of the proposed research is to clarify the functional relationships between the receptor for the P component of complement (P) and the recently described class of cell surface receptors which mediate macrophage migration. The P receptor will be purified to homogeneity by biochemical and biophysical studies. The functional properties of the purified P receptor will be established by complement dependent cellular cytotoxicity, in a cell population of cells which express the purified P receptor. Macrophage migration factor (MMF) will be purified and its chemical properties will be determined. The effect of
